Transnational Competence

Empowering Professional Curricula for Horizon-Rising Challenges

Peter H. Koehn and James N. Rosenau

Foreword by Peter McPherson, President, Association of Public and Land Grant Universities

“Transnational Competence can transform what tomorrow’s students will learn about the world we share and the institutions that teach them.”

—Allan E. Goodman, President and CEO,
Institute of International Education

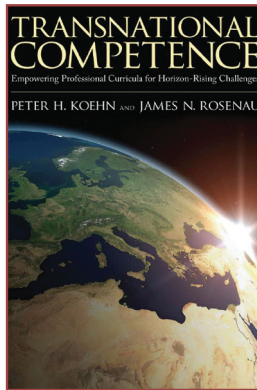

“Drawing upon powerful social scientific insights, Koehn and Rosenau offer compelling practical measures for developing the orientations and skills necessary for successfully engaging an ever-more dynamic and interconnected world.” —Steven Vertovec,
Director, Max-Planck Institute for the Study of Ethnic and Religious Diversity, Göttingen, Germany

“This book will be a useful tool for leaders in international academic affairs and in professional schools and colleges throughout universities all over the world, not only in North America. Developing better transnational competencies in our future leaders will help ensure that our future common destinies will be more secure, prosperous, and peaceful.”

—Earl Kellogg, Professor & Associate Provost for International Affairs (Emeritus), University of Illinois

“Koehn and Rosenau offer refreshingly detailed suggestions on how to prepare graduating practitioners with the skills needed to manage cross-border challenges. Transnational Competence should be read by anyone interested in international and global studies who is looking for cutting-edge professional preparation for our globalized world.”

—Xiao-huang Yin, Professor and Director of Global Studies in the Arts and Humanities, Michigan State University

“Universities in developing countries, including those in Africa, cannot ignore the fact that their graduates will invariably form part of the global knowledge society and, therefore, have to be equipped with the appropriate skills. Transnational Competence shows how this can be done. This excellent book should be of immense use to higher education institutions in both developed and developing nations.”

—Goolam Mohamedbhai,
Secretary-General, Association of African Universities;
Past President, International Association of Universities
